I am writing to correct a misunderstanding about the boulders planter walls behind Perley Lane Units 6-11.

The property owners have told me that the boulders are being referred to as retaining walls. This is a misunderstanding. They are not needed as retaining walls.

I placed the boulders in front of the solid ledge face that resulted from the blasting. They are not retaining anything except the small amount of dirt I placed to set them and create the planting areas, and the approximately one foot of soil on top of the ledge up by the stone wall.

The rocks serve a purely aesthetic purpose, tuning the ugly ledge face into a rock garden. I am submitting this to clear up any misunderstanding about the boulders.

Thank you for your assistance.
