Subject: RE: Bed and breakfasts

If it makes no difference to the state, then I'll concede, but I personally find it misleading. I have never professionally heard short term rentals referred to generally as B and Bs, but that could be an occupational hazard. If I were looking to rent on AirBnB (which I would never do), it would never occur to me to reference the B and B section of the zoning ordinance, again, despite the BnB in AirBnB. I sent a quick note to Ben Frost, Director of Public and Legal Affairs with NHHFA, to get his take and I'll forward his response.

Best,
Sarah
